State's Economic Environment

- Michigan's economy is one of the weakest in the U.S. and is not expected to significantly rebound in the near future.
- Michigan's 12% unemployment rate remains the nation's highest.
- The domestic auto industry remains on shaky financial ground and its future is unknown.
- It's not clear what the local impact may be from the economic stimulus package.

City Environment

- For years Michigan's restrictive system for funding local municipalities has resulted in cuts in Ann Arbor.
- Property tax revenues are declining due to lower assessed values, Pfizer's departure, and lower new construction.
- State-shared revenue is assumed flat, but there is a risk of decline since sales taxes are reportedly down 19%.
- The decline in the world's financial markets (over 50% from their highs) are projected to have a major impact on the City's required contributions for employee pension costs.
